GOAL WEIGHT CALCULATOR · BY @CHEWIEWINS

Keep it simple. Calories first.

Keto vs high-carb, vegan vs carnivore, low vs high fat... it's not about the diet label. Weight gain, loss or maintenance is all about calories. Then three simple principles make it easier to stick to.

1 Calories · 2 Protein · 3 Fibre · + Smart fats

THE MASTER RULE

1 Calories first

Eat less energy than you burn, consistently. What you expend matters, but a lot is decided by what you eat.

kcal/day	% deficit	Time to goal
set a fixed daily deficit	a % below maintenance	pick a date, get the pace

Use the app to set your deficit by any of the three. If a "deficit doesn't work", it usually isn't being kept consistently.

SECOND

2 Enough protein

~1.6 g / kg	80 kg → ~128 g
bodyweight per day, especially if training	example daily target

- Supports muscle while you're in a deficit and keeps you fuller.
- Spread it across meals: chicken, eggs, fish, Greek yoghurt, tofu, beans and lentils.

THIRD

3 Plenty of fibre

~14 g / 1000 kcal	25–30 g+
typical aim	per day, at least

- Short term: bulks food and fills you up (satiety).
- Long term: good for gut flora and colon health.
- Vegetables, oats, beans, lentils, fruit and wholegrains. Increase gradually and drink water.

TIPS

Smart fats

Favour monounsaturated and polyunsaturated fats. They help you feel full now and support long-term health.

Olive oil	Avocado	Nuts	Oily fish & seeds
& olives	in salads, on toast	almonds, walnuts, pistachios	salmon, sardines, mackerel; chia, flax

Healthy, but calorie-dense

~9 kcal/g	~170–200	~120
all fats	kcal: 30 g handful of nuts	kcal: 1 tbsp olive oil

Measure portions and count them in your calories. Good fats don't break the calorie rule.

Watch saturated fat and salt

Saturated fat: keep it low

Common guidance: under ~10% of calories. UK: about 20 g/day (women), 30 g/day (men).

Salt: under 6 g/day

That's about 1 teaspoon (UK guidance), including salt already in food.

Check labels. Common sources: processed meats, pastries, crisps and ready meals.

IN @CHEWIEWINS' OWN WORDS

> "It's not about low carbs keto vs high carbs, vegan vs carnivore, low vs high fat. It's all about calories in weight gain, loss or maintenance... Eat what you want following above guide. PS those saying caloric deficit does not work is because they are not consistently in deficit. I am a simple person."
